4. Discussion on Governance Transition (Kristy Greenwalt)

Update and Action Item

a. Kristy Greenwalt (Consultant), a subcontractor for HUD TA, introduced herself and shared that she is assisting with the governance transitioning. She presented on the governance transition. She gave context on the governance transition, provided an overview of the Results Based Accountability (RBA) and Homeless Management Information System (HMIS) Oversight Committee, and went over the new committees.

b. Kristy Greenwalt (Consultant) asked for feedback on where the functions of the HMIS Oversight Committee should be in the new governance structure. She will bring their input to the Governance Transition Committee.
   a. The committee deliberated whether it should be a subcommittee or a standalone committee.
      i. One concern of being a subcommittee is that it increases layers of approval which could mean that the people making the decisions won’t have the expertise and not know what they are approving. Other concerns include it slows things down and key details are not communicated.
      ii. In other CoCs, HMIS is its standalone committee. HMIS is more nuanced and challenging but important work.
      iii. If it is a standalone committee, there should be more interfacing between Systems Impact and CoC Compliance Committee so there is no duplication of work.
   b. The committee deliberated whether the HMIS oversight should be a subcommittee of the System Impact Committee or the CoC Compliance Committee.
      i. Even though a lot of the HMIS Committee’s work is compliance related, their aspirations live more in the System Impact Committee.
      ii. Committee members consider having a joint subcommittee that works with both committees.
         1. Should consider creating a structure where people do not have to attend a lot of meetings.
      iii. Whether it is a subcommittee or standalone committee, it will still need staffing.
   c. Kirsty Greenwalt (consultant) reminded the group that a standalone committee will need 11-13 members and will need to reach a quorum.
      i. Members discuss that even though having members with lived expertise will be great, it may be challenging to find 1/3rd of people with lived expertise for this committee. It’s difficult finding people overall for this work.

ii. Subcommittee may be more flexible since there isn’t a specific number of members needed.

d. Nic Ming (Co-Chair) stated that whether it is a subcommittee or stand-alone committee, it is critical that the committee needs to have the authority to enact policies and measures that will lead to a stronger system across the board.

i. Jonathan Russell (BACS) agreed and wondered if there is a way to have a subcommittee that is empowered.

e. Daniel Cooper (City of Oakland) asked what are the thoughts of the HMIS lead?

i. Alex Baker (HMIS team) answered that everyone has valid points. His concern is that if the HMIS Oversight Committee gets folded and becomes a subcommittee, then the committee’s work may get lost in the shuffles of other tasks. If it does become a subcommittee, then there needs to be effort to make sure that the work of this body is highlighted and addressed.

f. Tunisia Owens (FVLC) asked the committee if they have enough information to move forward on where it should live in the governance structure

i. Jonathan Russell (BACS) said he prefers the subcommittee model since it provides the efficiency the group needs.

ii. Mike Keller (Co-Chair) agreed with Jonathan and shared that if the subcommittee can’t make decisions, then it should be standalone.

iii. Nic Ming (Co-Chair) supports it being a subcommittee and for it to be empowered, it would serve best under the System Impact Committee.

iv. The members also consider it being a joint committee so that they

c. Jonathan Russell (BACS) made a motion that new HMIS Oversight Committee be a joint subcommittee of the Systems Impact and the Compliance Committees, with the core membership representing both of those committees in order to have a quorum and but not be exclusive and have the ability to report directly to the Leadership Board. Mike Keller (Chair) seconded the motion

a. 4 approved. 0 opposed. 0 abstained.

b. Motion passed.
